Current Comment

By Richard Lynden

Back in 1914 is was a popular notion that America could never become embroiled in a world war. People reasoned that our isolation was security, and that since we had no reason to quarrel with any other power, war was utterly inconceivable.

Thus, in 1917, when America was suddenly plunged into the thick of the fighting, the people of our great, apathetic nation were bewildered and incredulous.

It would seem that popular notions are slow to enrichen by experience. Today the same inane, unfounded optimism which characterized the American attitude on war in 1914 is being exhibited all over the land. Men are gadding about the United States of Europe; they wish it, therefor it will be.

The commoner in every country wants peace with all his heart. But in Europe, he does not confuse his wish with reality. He knows that history has its own logic; that there can be no surety of peace as long as any group in any country can gain by war. He knows, moreover, that wars do not make permanent settlements, and that one war leads to another. He can show you that every major war in Europe from the time of Louis XIV down to the Great war had for its cause exactly the same disputes and maladjustments as European statesmanship finds insoluble today.

Facing realities, the European commoner knows that a European war is inevitable so long as the profit motive, with its implications of narrow nationalism and balance-of-power diplomacy, is the impelling force in civilization.

The American mind cannot grasp these facts. An isolationist by tradition, removed from fear and vicious intrigue by thousands of miles of water, the rank-and-file American goes stolidly about his provincial business. He has no quarrel with the world, and presumes, therefor, that quarreling is a nasty, mischievous game which its own futility will soon destroy. At the club or at the small town "bull session" he will puff noisily about peace, how Teddy did it back in 1902, or if he be a modern sage, he will gad expansively on the United States of Europe.

But he will scrupulously ignore the fact that wars have always been futile and extravagant, and that they yet have continued ruthlessly down through the ages.

He will ignore the fact that fear and hate, without the removal of which no permanent peace can be obtained, are more widespread in Europe than ever they were; and that Hitler, riding on the crest of a wave of post-war fear and hate (and even making a policy of it), won the most amazing victory the German electorate had ever witnessed.

He will ignore Hitler's promises of Teutonic solidarity, of a German hegemony of the Slavic people, of a reconquest of lost territories, of an Austro-German union, with, in any and every case, a complete dislocation of the balance of power. He will ignore Austria's weakness, and the manner in which the Hitlerites are deliberately undermining the prestige of the Dollfuss government.

He will ignore France's desperation in the face of Germany's returning vigor (together with the latter's removal from the League), Mussolini's bellicosity, the revisionist movement in the Balkans, the delicate situation in the Polish Corridor.

All these things, vitally identified with the real situation in Europe, he will disregard as always he has done.

And when the next war comes, winged on its way by folly and stupidity and wishthinking, what will America say? Will it still be as incredulous and bewildered as it was in 1917.?

Improvement On Payne-Williams, In Near Future

Bidding for the construction work on part of Payne avenue and all of Williams rd., was opened last Monday, according to Harold Jepson, road master for County supervisor Joseph McKinnon.

It is expected that work will start on the Payne avenue pavement project with an 18-foot wide asphaltic surface which according to the plan will be laid out between Saratoga avenue and the bridge over San Tomas Aquino creek. This job will have been completed in approximately 60 days.

At the same time, Williams road will be similarly surfaced and paved to the same width in its entirety.

The work of grading and paving the Arden corner, at the juncture of Campbell avenue and the San Jose-Los Gatos road will be finished in two weeks. A bench is to be placed at the corner for the convenience of those waiting for busses.

HEADGATES OF PAGE DITCH BEING POURED

The Page dam, situated on Los Gatos creek about a mile from Campbell, was in the last stages of completion here today as the forms for the headgates to the Page ditch were ready for pouring. All the work on the dam is expected to be finished by the end of next week, according to G. W. Hunt, resident engineer.

Pouring of concrete for the dam proper was completed two weeks ago, and there now remains only the laying of the concrete, erosion - preventive mattress, and a few minor adjustments, to entirely dispose of the constructive forces. The mattress is being placed on both banks below the dam for 50 feet, and in the bed of the stream below the dam for a width of ten feet. It is composed of concrete blocks held together by cables.

Hunt announced further that the county would build a grade where Casey road has formerly been.

F. H. Tibbets, chief engineer, G. W. Page, superintendent in chief, and resident engineer Hunt are in charge of the construction.

Old Timer Will Run Off Jumping Frog Meet at Fair

San Jose, June 27—Jim Dixon, "the old man of the mountain," first white child to be born at Lake Tahoe, who has spent his life in the high Sierra mining country panning gold, will supervise the jumping frog contest which is a part of the San Jose merchants' fair to be held at Reed field fair grounds July 3 to 7.

Wrestling, boxing, a score of Radio-Keith-Orpheum vaudeville acts, side shows, and merchants displays are included in the program of the fair, which is being arranged to entertain 20,000 people daily.

Dixon, who more than fits the title "the old man of the mountain," was discovered by photographers and newspaper people at the first jumping frog jubilee at Angels Camp. He came out of the hills to see what was going on, and became a frog fan. Soon he became a jumping frog expert. Angels Camp folk liked him and he became on of the leaders of the yearly jubilee. He wears miner's clothes daily—he hasn't got any others.

The frog jump will be held on the afternoon of July 4 while vaudeville, wrestling, and boxing will be outstanding bits on the program of the evenings. Stageperformers include Bennie Walker, editor of the Woman's Magazine of the Air, Virginia Kelsey, recently a Fanchon & Marco star; Pee-Wee Le Beau, comedy roper; Berna Frechette, singer, and other stage stars of international fame.

The event is being produced by San Jose merchants under the direction of Arno Bachrodt, S. K. Corbett, and J. M. Shoults.

HARRY TODD ANNOUNCES EQUALIZAT'N CANDIDACY

San Francisco, June 27—Harry L. Todd, former postmaster of San Francisco, announced today that he plans immediately a speaking and organization tour of the counties comprising the first district of the state board of equalization, for which he is a candidate on the Republican ticket at the primaries on Aug. 28.

With a volunteer organization set up in San Francisco, Todd expects to devote a major portion of his time to San Mateo, Santa Clara, San Benito, Monterey, Santa Cruz and San Luis Obispo counties.

John L. McNab, distinguished Californian, will be general chairman of the Todd committee, with chairmen to be selected for each of the counties of the district.

In announcing his candidacy Todd said:

"At the request of many citizens of cities within the first district of the state board of equalization I have filed my candidacy for the Republican nomination for this district.

"I am filing only for the Republican nomination, as that is my party and it is the spirit and purpose of the direct primary law, as I take it, that the primary election should result in a selection of party nominees to contest the final decision at the general election.

"I promise the citizens of the seven counties comprising the first district that deputies will be selected strictly on merit. I am responsible to no one but myself and there will be no political 'pay-offs.'

"The business of the state board of equalization has assumed major proportions with the administration of the sales tax and liquor licensing. It shall be my purpose to handle this district strictly on business lines and with the same square deal to all that I gave to the San Francisco post office.

"So far as the sales tax is concerned, and with what influence I may have either as an individual or as a member of the board, I would work to relieve the common necessities of life from the operation of the sales tax at such time as a move in that direction becomes legally and constitutionally proper.

"John L. McNab, distinguished California, has consented to act as chairman of my general committee, the personnel of which, by counties, will be announced shortly."

At a meeting of the board of trustees, Campbell grammar school, Friday, Miss Montana Murray of Willow Glen was named to teach the high second grade. Miss Phyllis Ford of Rio Vista was named to do special teaching work at the same time.

The FARMERS CORNER

by RALPH H. TAYLOR

Executive Secretary Agricultural Council of California

One of the greatest weaknesses of popular government, both in California and in the nation at large, is, without doubt, the ancient but dangerous doctrine that "To the victors belong the spoils!"

Not only has it fostered graft and political racketeering, but it has also bred and nurtured the political patronage system which has been a contributing factor to two of the primary evils of present-day government—inefficiency and extravagance.

Payroll-padding, designed to take care of the politically-faithful, regardless of merit or ability, has probably added more millions to the cost of government—and consequently piled more burdens on the harassed taxpayer—than any other factor.

In light of these conditions, the constitutional amendment to be submitted to California voters at the general election this year, seeking to create a non-partisan state personnel board and generally strengthen civil service, should have real interest for the taxpaying electorate.

California farmers, among the state's heaviest taxpayers, should have special reason for giving careful consideration to any amendment which gives promise of breaking up the costly "spoils system" and improving efficiency in state service.

Impartially considered — and judged mainly from the standpoint of what it will contribute toward better government and as a check-rein on mounting payrolls—the civil service amendment, even in view of some of the admitted weakness of civil service itself, apparently has much to recommend it.

In lieu of the present Civil Service commission, which is constantly subject to the dictation of the Governor and his administration leaders, the new act calls for a State personnell board of five members serving for ten year terms and with the terms so "staggered" that no Governor, during a single administration, could gain control of the board.

Inasmuch as California has re-elected only two governors in the entire history of the state, the set-up to prevent an administration from gaining control in a single term would seem adequate protection, so far as this phase of the act is concerned.

The act provides at the outset that appointments and promotions in the state service, except for a small group, specifically exempted, shall be based exclusively on "merit, efficiency and fitness as ascertained by competitive examination."

It prohibits the exemption from civil service of any additional groups of employees and likewise prohibits "temporary appointments" to state service when there is an eligible list of civil service employees. In the absence of a suitable civil service list, it limits temporary appointments to six months in any one year.

The major objection which can be raised to the act—and it is a sound objection in many instances—is that the inefficient employee is frequently protected and kept in office by civil service. The State Legislature, if the act is approved by the voters, can and should meet this objection, however, by providing reasons and causes for dismissal which will facilitate getting rid of the unfit.

It is undoubtedly true, as sponsors of the act claim, that there are far more inneffi-cient employees in state service because their original appointment was secured through political influence than where the original employment was governed by merit and competitive examination. One of the main difficulties in ridding the service of inneffi-cient employees, it is equally true, is political influence, and the new act, by setting up a non-partisan board with full powers of dismissal, should help to remedy this situation.

On the whole, the act promises improved efficiency in the state service. And improved efficiency, together with the restrictions tending to prevent each succeeding governor from cluttering up the state service with camp-followers, should reduce costs.

Conciliators for Farm Bankruots To be Named

T. C. Tucker, chairman of the California Farm Debt Adjustment committee, today received a communication from Dr. H. C. M. Case, assistant to the governor of the Federal Farm Credit administration, that the President has signed a law amending the national bankruptcy act, whereby provision is added making it mandatory on the part of federal courts having jurisdiction over bankruptcy matters to appoint county conciliators for every county having more than 500 farmers within its borders. Where there are less than 500, a conciliator will be appointed for two or more counties.

These new county conciliators must be appointed within 30 days of the time of the signing of the act by the President, and since this occurred on June 7, a full complement of conciliators should have their appointments by June 7.

This cooperation between the farm debt adjustment committees and the county conciliators has been found to be mutually beneficial in expediting action on cases submitted to each.

The Rev. and Mrs. Joyce Farr and baby, Doreen, departed yesterday for Boston, where Mr. Farr will take over two small parishes while attending the Boston University School of Theology. They will reside either in Cochessett or Eastmanfield, 30 and 35 miles from Boston, respectively, at which places Mr. Farr will take over his ministry. They expect to return to California some time during the summer of next year.

Well, if I was to tell you all that has happened it would be one of these here books because it's a laugh a minute to hear these English talk. COMPLIMENTS PUBLISHER

Harry C. Smith, publisher of The Campbell Press, was complimented upon his contribution to the success of the Santa Clara valley water conservation project in a communication received at the office of the Press last Friday. The letter was signed by the directors.

The main body of the communication contained the following resolution:

"Resolved that the directors of the Santa Clara Valley Water Conservation district express to Mr. Smith their hearty appreciation of the generous use accorded of the columns of the Press to information concerning the water conservation project. Without this presentation by the press, the people of our valley could not have been so successfully educated as is indicated by the remarkably favorable vote on June 19."

The Press was at all times stoutly advocative of the project during the pre-election campaign.

Scouts Postpone Summer Outings

Upon the advice of City and County Health officials and prominent physicians identified with Scout activities, the Board of Directors of the Sta. Clara county council, B.S.A., has decided that the summer camp will not be opened as scheduled.

This action was taken to show the complete willingness of Scout officials to cooperate with authorities in meeting an emergency.

Should it seem advisable to proceed with the summer camp program at a later date, and should the sanction of the health departments be secured, all troops will be notified at once, according to the directors.

Meanwhile, Scout officials have suggested that all plans for independent troop excursions and hikes be abandoned, and in those cases where troops are planning to meet during the vacation period, that such meetings be held out doors, and that all mass formations, games, and other activities resulting in personal contacts, be avoided.

The Rev. J. H. Bennett announced last Monday that the Campbell Boy Scout troop would discontinue all group activity for the present in response to a plea by health authorities in the measures they are taking against the infantile paralysis epidemic in this county.

In accordance with the announcement, the regular meetings of the troop will be indefinitely postponed, and no boys will be given the sanction of the local scout authorities in attending the summer camp this year at Swanton.

The scout entertainment which had been planned for this Friday has also been cancelled, and the money collected for it will be refunded upon presentation of tickets.

CHINESE GORDON

General Charles Gordon, better known as Chinese Gordon, was born in the army and trained at arms. His father was Gen. H. W. Gordon of the Royal Artillery, and he was educated at Taunton school and the Royal Military Academy. When the Crimean war broke out he had been a second Lieutenant in the Royal Engineers less than three years, although he had experienced no previous active service. However, within another three years he had seen enough of war and privation, pestilence and famine, to be entitled to call himself a veteran. He had rubbed shoulders with the oldest peoples of the earth and the newest. His mind had become full of the tumults and disorders and dangers of the Near East in which he was to be in some way involved during the most of his life.

A courage which at times amounted almost to religious fervor, led him into many feats of bravery while leading Chinese and English forces against rebel brigands in China, and earned for him the respect and gratitude of the Chinese government. He twice refused a large gift of gold offered by the Emperor of China. The title of Titu, highest rank in the Chinese army was conferred upon him and he received also the order of the Yellow Jacket, the highest decoration. This order made him one of the chosen twenty of the Emperor's bodyguard.

Gordon's later life was devoted to activities in Egypt and the Upper Nile country where he finally gave his life in an endeavor to establish peace and unity among the confilcting forces which are even yet only partly under control.

DITCH FOR NEW MAIN REVEALS OLD METHODS

Amazing discoveries bearing upon the history of earlier public conveniences, was brought to light last week when the Campbell Water company sought to repair and replace equipment used in giving service to this community.

At the corner of Campbell avenue and Central avenue, for instance, directly in front of Guy Farley's office, there had been many years ago a two-inch fire hydrant. While workmen were in the course of replacing pipe at this spot last week they observed a small wet place on the sidewalk. Mr. Ralph Hyde, manager of the company, was asked about it. After some reflection he recalled that in the old days a hardwood peg had been used to keep the town water pipes from losing their contents, and that one had been placed precisely at this juncture.

This was the first revelation. The second was that the pipes were laid at unequal depths. Mr. Hyde recalled that this was an example of old-fashioned expediency, where plows were used in making the trenches into which the pipe was laid. Since in some places the ground was soft and low, and in others, hard and dry, the general effect was that a beautifully undulating trench was usually the trough into which the pipe was laid.

When grading became necessary, with the arrival of paved streets, some of the pipe thus laid was virtually exposed, and replacements had long since to be made. But the water company had yet a few replacemnts to make, and that is how the older methods of rendering public service were brought to light.

The old days are done with now; but there will be reminiscing over their departure.

KIWANIS NOTES By Heck

William Lloyd was declared the golfing champion of the local Kiwanis club last Monday evening at the Italia hotel in San Jose when the Giants of the Kiwanis club were guests of the Midgets.

The Giants were a group of ardent golfers who banded together and challenged another group, which was quickly dubbed the Midgets, to a golf tournament which was to decide the championship of the club. The intransigent Giant group won that tournament several weeks ago, with Lloyd and Herold Morton turning in lows for their respective teams

After the individual championship between these two had been settled apparently to the satisfaction of all, Ralph Hyde, member of the Giants, stepped forward at the banquet, quite without precedent, and challenged Lloyd, of the Midgets, to a special 90-hole match, advancing as an argument for the tournament that he had been Lloyd's golfing partner for years and "could take him with perfect ease and dispatch."

Lloyd met the challenge, taking a 20-point handicap against 18-points for Hyde. In the first 18 holes of the play Lloyd was reported to have turned in a 91 as against a 92 for Hyde.

Guests tonight were Ralph Hyde, Guy Farley, Herold Morton, Roy Archibald, Frank Cutting and Jack Murdock. Their hosts were William Lloyd, Carl Field, Lawrence Campodonico, Ralph Smith, Rev. J. H. Bennett and D. H. Cramer.
